

The jolly postman came one day,
From over the hills and far away.
All was quiet, not much sound,
It seemed people could not be found.

Through the windows peeped the folks
Who usually shared tales and jokes,
But not much laughter filled the air,
As lockdown meant that smiles were rare.

